Piaggio Aerospace Delivers More Evos

by Amy Laboda - May 22, 2019, 6:48 AM

Piaggio Aerospace (Booth SD307) will soon deliver the first P.180 Avanti Evo to a customer on the African continent, as well as another of the turboprop twins to a repeat customer in Switzerland. It also announced that the first P.180 Avanti Evo entered service in India, having been delivered recently by Piaggio partner Business Aviation Private Limited to an unnamed customer.

The Swiss Avanti is being delivered by Italy-based Orion Fly to Sir Lindsay Owen-Jones, who has owned and operated earlier models of the aircraft. "I decided to go for a new P.180 after my positive experience with the first aircraft," said Owen-Jones. "I chose the new generation of the P.180, the Avanti Evo, for its extended range capabilities, its environmental friendliness so appreciated by the local community, and its further improved ability to take off and land on short runways."

The East-African unidentified customer is expecting its Avanti in just a few days, via ferry flight from Italy, Piaggio said.
